save about $600,000. He said personally it would mean he would make $10,887 less next year and ministers would see $10,050 less on their pay-cheques.

If MLAs agree to cut, when it goes to their member services committee, it will cost them $6,700 per year.

Prentice said discussions with provincial unions are ongoing, but he believes Albertans will want to see the pain shared.

"They expect people who work for the government, whether we're elected or whether they're employees, to share part of that burden," he said.

AUPE president Guy Smith said the premier sacrificing part of his salary has no impact on his members' willingness to sacrifice theirs.

"For us it makes no difference; we have a collective agreement that we signed with the Government of Alberta," he said. "We expect the government to honour that collective agreement."

The government payroll got lighter Thursday after Premier Jim Prentice announced a five per cent cut to cabinet wages, with MLAs and possibly government workers next in line.

Following a meeting, Prentice said his cabinet agreed to cut their pay and he will ask MLAs to take the same hit next week, while continuing to suggest public servants will have to sacrifice.

"I think this is the kind of leadership that Albertans expect from their elected officials in these challenging times," he said.

Prentice said if all MLAs agreed to the cut it would

LGBTQ rights

Minister all ears for GSA talks

Alberta's head of education said the government is in "listening mode" when it comes to potential planning for gay-straight alliances (GSAs) legislation.

Minister Gordon Dirks told media Thursday that he appreciates the opportunity to hear as many perspectives as possible, as he attended the Rocky Mountain Civil Liberties Association public consultation on GSAs in Edmonton.

The event's panel heard speakers from government, LGBTQ advocates and students, with the intention of submitting a list of recommendations to the province for Bill 10 after the evening's discussion. Dirks said there were several themes he's heard repeatedly when it comes to GSAs.

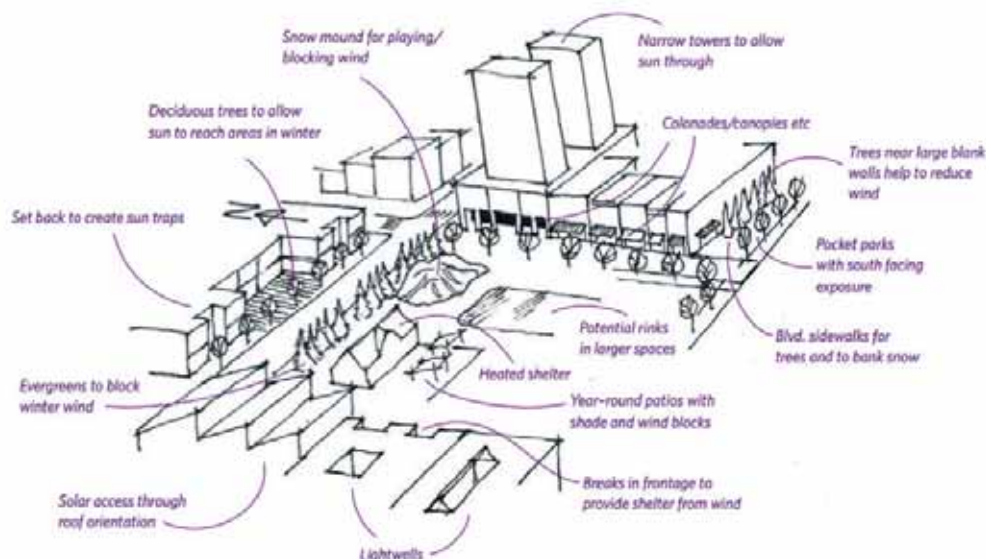

"One of them is that children who desire a GSA should have one and that's certainly been the position of myself and our government; That children who desire a GSA should be able to have one," he said.

Dirks said his goal as education minister is to ensure children receive education in a safe environment, free of bullying.

Kiyl Fairall of MacEwan Sexual Health Club said the safety of LGBTQ students is a fundamental right and legislation is needed to protect students.

"We believe that there absolutely needs to be legislation in place when it comes to forming GSAs in every school board across the province, as not every LGBTQ youth may have a supportive adult or individual who is willing to advocate for them in their everyday lives."

Making winter more bearable by design

Urban planning. Getting Edmontonians outside the focus of WinterCity Strategy

STEPHANIE DUBOIS

stephanie.dubois@metronews.ca

Old Man Winter had better watch his back, as Edmonton now has official winter design guidelines thanks to a group of citizens who put a 'winter map' together.

Outdoor firepits, snow storage and protecting people from the wind are all part of the guidelines.

"This isn't tomorrow that it's implemented and all of a sudden it's revolutionary. What we're doing here is planting a lot of seeds that are going to germinate," said Simon O'Byrne, co-chair of the WinterCity Strategy committee.

A portion of the document focuses on design suggestions to "make it easier to get around in winter" for pedestrians and cyclists, specifically mentioning piloting raised crosswalks and heated walking surfaces.

Molly MacDougall, who's testing out winter cycling for the first time this season, said the design guidelines make sense.

"The snow removal strategy which mentioned that snow would be cleared to the edge of the roadways is significant for cyclists in areas where it's not a separated bike lane but a shared use bikeway or painted lanes," she said. "It's definitely a step in the right direction."

No winter guidelines would be complete for Edmonton without making use of the amount of sunshine the city receives in the winter, with elements such as suggestions for narrow towers to allow sun to shine through and for solar access in buildings.

"We're building so much in the city ... that we have to make sure we realize the full potential of that investment and have it work year-round, not just in summer conditions," said Susan Holdsworth, coordinator for the WinterCity Strategy.

Strategy

Applying the winter guidelines to developments and redevelopments is a key point in the winter guidelines strategy.

- Incorporating light and colour in public spaces is listed as a priority for the winter urban design document.
- The document applies to all parts of the city, however, it won't be completely mandatory moving forward.

First Nations. Treaty Six, Fort Edmonton partner up

Fort Edmonton Park and the Treaty Six First Nation will work together to tell the story of where we all live under an agreement signed Thursday.

The new memorandum aims to ensure aboriginal culture is respected and represented in the fort's program. Mayor Don Iveson said, and while the fort has tried, it has only been telling one side of the story.

"Unintentionally, it has been a settler's narrative and a colonial narrative," he said.

Iveson said the change at the park is to better reflect the true nature of the area.

"It will become a shared story, a shared history that is respectful and inclusive," he said.

Grand Chief Bernice Marshall of the Confederacy of Treaty Six First Nations said they're excited for the agreement's possibilities.

She said it was important for all Canadians to know about their ancestors' role.

Doug Goss, chairman of the fort's management company, said this would allow them to build something with Treaty Six.

Safety. Woman critical after struck by snowplow

A woman remains in critical but stable condition after being hit by a City of Edmonton snow removal vehicle Wednesday night.

Northwest division officers were called out around 5:10 p.m. to the collision at 134 Avenue and 113A street.

Police believe the 39-year-old woman was crossing 113A Street in the marked crosswalk when the tractor with a front-mounted snowplow hit her while making a right-hand turn to head south.

Police say neither speed nor alcohol were factors in the collision. The Major Collision Investigation Unit has taken over the ongoing investigation and no charges have been laid at this time.

Cheryl Oxford, a spokeswoman for the city, said the collision has been distressing for the driver.

"The operator was actually a driver with over 20 years experience. He's currently not at work and has been offered counselling," she told media Thursday afternoon.

"All of our drivers receive safety training as to the safe use of the equipment," she added.

The city will be conducting its own internal investigation to determine if anything could have been done to prevent the incident. METRO

Public sector unions not budging on wage trims

Labour. Teachers' association president says cabinet pay cuts are just an attempt to point fingers

jeremy.nolaïs@metronews.ca

Planned cuts to elected members' wages were merely an attempt by Alberta's premier to put the burden of the province's financial woes on the backs of public-sector employees, union representatives charged Thursday.

Alberta Premier Jim Prentice said both he and members of his cabinet would trim their annual earnings by five per cent effective immediately. He also said he would ask whip George Vanderburg to bring a motion to a legislative committee to approve a similar rollback for backbench MLAs and would discuss compensation with public-sector union representatives.

But those representatives weren't buying the premier's apparent measure of good faith.

"All of this has been groundwork to try to point the finger at public-sector workers," said Mark Ramsankar, president of the Alberta Teachers' Association. "We've got trouble in the province, we've got an issue with our finances. Rather than deal with taxes, we're going to start with employees first."

Asked if his organization would ever consider a wage cut, Ramsankar replied, "The flat answer is 'no'. Teachers have had three years of (zero per cent raises)."

Guy Smith, president of the Alberta Union of Public Employees, said Prentice's pledge was purely based on optics and wage rollbacks for his members wouldn't come close to solving the province's financial crisis, which is being driven by a rapid decline in the price of oil.

"I think Premier Prentice believes this is going to put more pressure on us to capitulate, and it doesn't," Smith said.

Oil prices have plunged from more than $100 US a barrel last summer to less than $50 today, siphoning billions of dollars from the treasury.

Gil McGowan, president of the Alberta Federation of Labour, lashed out at Prentice on social media.

"Prentice (is) setting up for (an) attack on public sector wages, even though MLAs have enjoyed far bigger wages and increases than front-line workers," he wrote.

The opposition Wildrose, meanwhile, chalked up Thursday's move as being nothing more than "window-dressing" and leader Heather Forsyth called instead for a rollback of eight per cent to bring wages

No problem for MLA

At least one Calgary MLA said Thursday she had no qualms with taking a pay cut in line with those of cabinet ministers and the premier.

- "We are going to be facing very difficult times ahead," said Calgary-Currie's Christine Cusanelli. "Everybody in every sector is going to feel the crunch and we need to be prepared to show that we are actual leaders who will make a sacrifice."

New modular classrooms won't be an option for south Edmonton school Monsignor William Irwin, as the Catholic school district officials try to come up with a plan to solve capacity issues. METRO FILE

Packed school has to move out a grade

Education. District reviewing parent feedback

LEAH HOLOIDAY

One south Edmonton school is forced to reroute new coming Kindergarten students or move next year's Grade 6 classes as the building bursts at the seams.

Parents and officials from the city's Catholic school board met Thursday night to discuss the fate of next year's students at Monsignor William Irwin.

According to assistant superintendent Boris Radyo,

Quoted

"We want to expedite this decision in the best interest of our families."

Boris Radyo, ECS assistant superintendent

the school is at capacity. With the current 784 students and 19 built out modulars, there's no room to accommodate next year's 15 per cent enrolment increase and potential 900 students.

"We need to find four additional classrooms for that campus and because we're unable to add modular classrooms, it means that the district would have to undertake either an attendance area change or the removal of students from the school," he said.

Parents were presented with the two options at Thursday's meeting: move next year's Grade 6 students or reroute 184 kindergarten students to another location.

Tanya Fischer-Ooraikul, who has two children at the school and another starting kindergarten next year, said it would be very difficult to have her youngest daughter going to a different school from her two other children.

"To me it's a smoother transition (for Grade 6's to leave)," said Fischer-Ooraikul, who acknowledged some of the issues facing parents with Grade 6 students.

Radyo said the district plans on making a final decision by Feb. 13 so that families can make arrangements for next school year.

The rest of the season will be announced (Friday)," said Taylor Chadwick with the Theatre Network which operates in the Roxy Theatre.

Officials remained tight-lipped about the Friday afternoon announcement but Chadwick did allude to a partnership between Theatre Network and Teatro La Quindicina, Shadow Theatre and Fringe Theatre Adventures for the 2015 season.

"Think of it as all these teams are coming together to make sure one of their friends doesn't go under," he said.

The investigation into the blaze is still ongoing, say fire officials, with arson ruled out.

The city is looking to make sure construction hoardings, like these around the new Royal Alberta Museum, close sidewalks less often. METRO FILE

City looks to open up sidewalks downtown

Hording. Regulations have been prioritizing roads over sidewalks amid growing construction and development, report finds

ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

The high number of city sidewalks that are closed downtown appear to be as much about bad regulation as they are booming construction, but the city is promising change to open them up.

A report on the issue, going to councillors next week, identifies some flaws with city regulations that have almost encouraged builders to close sidewalks rather than roads.

Among the problems the report identified is that builders closing a road pay four times more than those closing a sidewalk.

"Our whole fee structure, which is embedded in our safety codes bylaw, places priority on the roads," said Claudia Wong-Rusnak, who worked on the report.

She said the city plans to work with builders to try to find ways to change the situation, but they want to make sure pedestrians can still get around.

Coun. Scott McKeen, who asked for the report, said the city didn't used to deal with a building boom and people living downtown, and some things will have to change.

"These are growing pains. It's the kind of issues that other cities have faced before us, but we're seeing now as we get this boom of development in the downtown," he said.

Downtown

Prospective tenants have toured Sobeys space: Official

Who will occupy the old downtown Sobeys location? The answer remains unclear, but there's interest.

Eric Slatter, vice-president of Colliers International, which is working with Sobeys, said there have already been tours of the large retail space on the corner of 104 Street and Jasper Avenue but the grocer has yet to release its marketing plan for the space.

Slatter added the grocery corporation has a lease at the building until 2018.

Members of the public have turned to social media inquiring if there's a covenant on the 19,000-square-foot space preventing other grocers from starting up at the location, but Jim Taylor of the Downtown Business Association and Colliers International say that's not the case.

"Sobeys is just a tenant in the building, so it's incredibly unlikely that they would have a caveat on restricting them from allowing another grocer to operate. They do have a lease, which would likely have an exclusion in it preventing another grocer, but it's ultimately at Sobeys' discretion," said Slatter.

Sobeys has not responded to Metro's requests for comment.

Sobeys officials decided to close their downtown location almost six months ago, citing it as one of their "under-performing stores."

Downtown residents say they hope the space is filled soon. "We all know that downtown needs a grocery store," said Ed Fong of the 104 Street steering committee. STEPHANIE DUBOIS/METRO

Hospital tests medical app

Health. Edmonton first to use device that screens heart problems in newborns

LEAH HOLOIDAY
leah.holoiday@metronews.ca

The tiny beating of a newborn's heart is getting extra attention at an Edmonton hospital thanks to a medical app designed to help detect any potential problems before families take their little ones home.

The Grey Nuns Hospital became the first facility in the world to use Eve — a medical app used to screen newborns for congenital heart defects just hours after they're born.

Grey Nuns Hospital unit manager Erin Peters said in the past nurses screened babies who were at risk or symptomatic for possible defects. Since November, the hospital extended its screening to all newborns in order to catch any issues early on.

Now with Eve, Peters said not only will every baby be screened, but the tests are non-invasive and ensure consistent results.

"It's less than a (size of a) Band-Aid that wraps around a hand and a foot and the test is over in a couple of minutes. Most babies don't even notice," she said.

In December, nurses were able to screen 600 babies.

"We've been fortunate we've been able to catch a couple babies early on and then they're sent for further screening while they're in hospital," said Peters. "For parents, it means a little more peace of mind."

For parents James and Becky Sheppard, who welcomed their baby boy into the world Wednesday, the test was a no-brainer.

"I think any step they take to make sure you take a healthy baby (home) and not have to come back, is a good step to take," said Becky.

James said it was something he didn't think about, but once the test was done it was a relief.

"It's one less thing to worry about," he said.

Alberta flu deaths already above 'normal' range

Alberta has already seen 52 flu-related deaths so far this season, putting it outside the "normal" range described by the province's chief medical officer of health and well ahead of the 30 deaths seen last flu season.

Chief medical officer of health Dr. James Talbot said earlier this month the "normal death rate" in Alberta is between 30 and 40 by the end of a flu season.

Talbot also said elderly Albertans had been impacted the most by the H3N2 strain of flu virus that has been circulating this season.

14-year sentence in Nova Scotia killing

Manslaughter. Case has affected many people in the Acadian village of Petit-de-Grat, judge says

Phillip Boudreau's death at sea has "torn at the fabric" of a fishing village in Cape Breton and could reverberate in the community for decades, a Nova Scotia judge said Thursday as he sentenced a man to 14 years in prison for manslaughter.

Joseph James Landry, who shot, ran over and hooked Boudreau with a fishing gaff, was granted about 2-1/2 years' credit for time served in custody awaiting trial, meaning he would serve 11-1/2 years.

Boudreau's slaying has affected many people in the Acadian village of Petit-de-Grat, said Judge Joseph Kennedy of the Nova Scotia Supreme Court.

"It has, as the Crown suggested, torn at the fabric of a close-knit traditional area of this province, causing dissension and divide and disharmony amongst the good, hard-working, honest people," Kennedy said.

A jury convicted Landry, 67, of manslaughter in November after hearing that the 43-year-old Boudreau was the victim of a sustained attack at the mouth of a local harbour on June 1, 2013.

The man's body has never been found. In a victim impact statement, Boudreau's sister spoke of the anguish she felt "knowing his body was left discarded like old bait."

Landry pleaded not guilty to second-degree murder. During his trial, the Crown said Boudreau's death was the result of a sustained attack by a three-man fishing crew that included Landry, one of four people charged in the case.

Videotaped interviews Landry gave to police were entered as evidence. They showed Landry telling police he shot and rammed Boudreau's boat after Boudreau cut his traps, threatened to set his house on fire and taunted him for years.

"I wanted to destroy him," Landry told police. "I was seeing black. I was so mad."

The other three accused have yet to stand trial.

Flu. Vaccine does little against H3N2 strain

This year's flu vaccine offers little or no protection in Canada against becoming sick enough to require medical care, a study published Thursday suggests.

The research, based on data from British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec, found the vaccine offers most people virtually no protection against the strain that's causing the lion's share of the illness this year, H3N2. There weren't enough cases of flu caused by H1N1 or influenza B viruses to assess whether the vaccine would have been more protective.

"I would say overall it's signalling no protection," said lead author Dr. Danuta Skowronski, an influenza expert at the British Columbia Centre for Disease Control. Skowronski said that if people are at high risk of developing pneumonia or getting ill if they contract influenza, they should take other measures.

Chief defends troops directing airstrikes in Iraq

Military. Top soldier says Canadian involvement is not a 'combat' role and falls within mission mandate

Canada's top soldier says he authorized troops to help Iraqi security forces target Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) fighters, but denies it can, strictly speaking, be called a "combat" role.

Speaking before a parliamentary committee on Thursday, Chief of Defence Staff Tom Lawson said that Canadian Forces have operated within their noncombat mandate, even while directing CF-18 airstrikes.

Lawson told the committee he "had not anticipated" Canadian special forces would be in a position to safely direct airstrikes when he ruled them out last October.

Lawson found himself in the middle of a war of words about the precise role of Canada's fight against ISIL.

For the government, the mission has "evolved" since it was approved by Parliament — without the support of the opposition NDP and Liberals — late last year. This evolution, for the Conservatives, explains why Canadian soldiers found themselves under fire on the front lines three separate times, despite a mission limited to advising and assisting Iraqi troops.

For the opposition, Canada's role in the fight against ISIL has not been defined, no budget has been released and no clear goal outside of "degrading and destroying" the self-proclaimed caliphate has been outlined.

Frustration among opposition MPs was evident, in the face of Conservative backbenchers suggesting they're insufficiently behind the troops for asking those questions.

$13 million lost in seven seconds

Joel Ifergan stands beside a copy of his lottery ticket Thursday at his home in Montreal. The Supreme Court of Canada refused to hear his case claiming he is owed $13 million for having the winning numbers on a ticket that was printed seven seconds after the deadline. Ifergan bought two lottery tickets in May 2008, but the one with the eventual winning combination popped out of the terminal seven seconds after the 9 p.m. deadline. Omnibus bill set to expand anti-terror powers

Prime Minister Stephen Harper will unveil Friday details of an omnibus bill that will enact two new laws, and make amendments to the criminal code, the CSIS Act, the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act among a host of others.

The government put the Commons on notice that funding will attach to the measures, but a senior government official said it shouldn't be interpreted as new funding.

However, the Official Opposition insists the question of resources is the main one and is skeptical of the need for new laws.

Harper will press the need to increase information-sharing among federal departments and agencies, authorize CSIS to disrupt or diminish threats earlier in an investigation, deter and order the removal of online content that promotes terrorism, enhance no-fly rules for airline travelers deemed a risk and lower the evidentiary threshold to issue peace bonds — court-ordered restrictions on a person's liberty and communications.

Cold War. Gorbachev warns West of Hot War

Ex-Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev says the confrontation between Russia and the West could spill into all-out war.

More than 5,100 people have been killed in a bloody conflict in eastern Ukraine between government troops and pro-Russian separatists. Ukraine accuses Russia of aiding the separatists while Russia says the West is behind Ukraine's attempts to retake the rebel-held areas.

Gorbachev, in comments to the Interfax news agency, said Thursday the West has "dragged" Russia into a new Cold War and warned of risks of a military confrontation.

"I can no longer say that this Cold War will not lead to a 'Hot War.' I fear that they could risk it," he was quoted as saying.

Gorbachev was one of the architects of the peaceful dismantling of communist rule in eastern Europe.

Loved ones plead for pilot, journalist held by ISIL

Jordan. Prisoner swap would run counter to government's stance on extremism

The father of a Jordanian fighter pilot and the wife of a Japanese journalist held by the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) pleaded for their loved ones' lives after a possible prisoner swap wasn't carried out by a deadline of sunset Thursday.

The extremists had demanded that Jordan release a female al-Qaida prisoner from death row, and they purportedly threatened in an audio message to kill the airman if she was not freed by the deadline.

After sundown in the Middle East, there was no word on the fate of Lt. Muath al-Kaseasbeh and journalist Kenji Goto, and the families' agonizing wait dragged on.

"We received no assurances from anyone that he is alive," Jawdat al-Kaseasbeh, a brother of the pilot, told The Associated Press. "We have no clue about where the negotiations stand now. We are waiting, just waiting."

The possibility of a swap was raised Wednesday when Jordan said it was willing to trade Sajida al-Rishawi, the al-Qaida prisoner, for the pilot.

However, the audio message purportedly posted by ISIL only said the pilot would be killed if al-Rishawi was not delivered to the Turkish border by the deadline. There was no mention of Goto and no word on whether the pilot would be traded for the woman. The authenticity of the recording could not be verified independently by The Associated Press.

On Thursday afternoon, Jordan's government spokesman, Mohammed al-Momani, signalled that, in any case, a swap was on hold because the hostage-takers had not delivered proof the pilot is still alive.

Al-Rishawi, 44, faces death by hanging for her role in a suicide bombing, one of three simultaneous attacks on Amman hotels in November 2005 that killed 60 people. She survived because her belt of explosives didn't detonate. She initially confessed, but later recanted, saying she was an unwilling participant.

Al-Rishawi, who is from the Iraqi city of Ramadi, has close family ties to the Iraqi branch of al-Qaida, a precursor of ISIL. Three of her brothers were al-Qaida operatives killed in fighting in Iraq.

Toronto teen a student of the investing game

Stock market.

Brandon Fleisher, 17, has doubled his initial $50k investment over the course of one year

GILBERT NGABO
Metro in Toronto

Call him the pup of Bay Street. At 17, Brandon Fleisher understands the ins and outs of stock markets like a, well, wolf.

The Grade 12 student at Toronto's Upper Canada College has, within a year, doubled his initial investment of $50,000. He also started a company through which he offers free analysis of different stocks and markets.

Fleisher picked up an interest in the world of stock exchanges when he was in Grade 8.

"In a math class, we all had to pick a stock and grow the most out of it by the end of the year," he said. "I did very well, then started playing virtual stock-exchange games with fake money, and it really gave me the thrill."

Not too long after, Fleisher started spending entire days combing through companies' financial reports and studying balance sheets.

It took about two years of balancing school workload and his passion for running a virtual portfolio before he got the chance to invest real money. Fascinated by his success and skills in the markets, Fleisher's parents gave him money to setup an account with a broker.

"I worked really hard to gain the trust from my parents to invest the real money in my portfolio," he said, explaining that he was making big profits in the fake money trade, where he invested in Netflix and Tesla.

He has since broadened his network of investors, and his company, The Financial Bulls, is now operated with him as CEO and other people his age offering financial advice.

growing and profitable and have the patience to stay invested for a good while.

It also helps if you're a bit of a whiz kid too.

"I really do like investing. I don't really see it as a burden," he said. "When I am doing investments, it's not as if I need to take a break at any point at all."

Super Bowl. CRTC moves to ban subbing of U.S. ads

Super Bowl ads

The substitution of Canadian content over the time-honoured institution of U.S. Super Bowl ads is coming to an end.

- Not in time for Sunday. While the decision comes too close to take effect this weekend, it may become a reality in 2016 if Bell Media — the rights holder for the game — waives its right to switch ads.

Canada's broadcast regulator is banning the substitution of Canadian advertisements over American ads during the Super Bowl.

The decision won't take effect in time for this Sunday's game, but it could be in place for next year if Bell Media — the rights holder for the 2016 event — waives its rights to switch ads.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission says the new rule will be officially in place for the 2017 Super Bowl.

Television networks will, however, still be allowed to simultaneously substitute advertising on programming broadcast over local TV stations, but not on specialty channels.

CRTC chairman Jean-Pierre Blais also warns that penalties could be imposed on broadcasters if the ad switching disrupts programming enough for viewers to complain.

In a speech to a London, Ont., business gathering today, Blais also announced that broadcasters will lose the ability to switch ads, along with mandatory carriage privileges on cable and satellite services, if they shut down transmitters that allow Canadians access to free, over-the-air TV signals.

Blais also announced today that the CRTC is ordering Bell Mobility and Videotron to stop giving their own mobile television services an unfair advantage over other Internet services.

The two companies have exempted their own mobile television services from their standard monthly data charges while content from other websites or apps is counted against a customer's data cap.

U.S. Senate passes bill approving Canadian pipeline

Long-suffering supporters of the Keystone XL pipeline won a moral victory in the U.S. Congress on Thursday — but that's about all they won.

A bill to build the oil pipeline from Canada was approved by the Senate for the first time in the almost seven-year struggle over one of the most-debated pieces of oil infrastructure in memory.

Previous efforts to approve the pipeline crashed into the notoriously high hurdle for getting anything through the U.S. Congress's upper chamber. Thanks to a newly empowered Republican majority, the legislation finally cleared that three-fifths requirement Thursday in a vote of 62-36.

Now the reality check: It's still not a law. It stands almost no chance of becoming one. And that's because it didn't get the 67 votes required to overcome a presidential veto.

The indispensability of those final few votes was driven home when a spokesman for President Barack Obama once again promised a veto.

"Our position on the Keystone legislation is well-known," White House spokesman John Earnest said a few hours before the vote.

SEX ED FOR THOSE WHO DON'T LIVE IN CARE-A-LOT

THE KOHLER
REPORT

By Rebecca Kohler

How young is too young to learn about sexual consent in Canadian schools?

That's the big debate in Ontario this week, after Premier Kathleen Wynne announced kids as young as six will soon be learning about how body language and facial expressions relate to consent as part of an overhaul to the province's decades-old sex-ed curriculum.

It's unclear if the lessons will be taught verbally or through finger painting, but what's for sure is that it will be taught — and hurry for that. I consent to consent ed!

Unlike some more progressive provinces whose sex-ed programs have been updated in the past decade, Ontario's was developed in 1998 when cellphones were just shoebox-sized devices used by rich people on TV. The last time the province tried to update the program, it got shelved because of objections from religious groups. The debate was recently reignited when two eighth-graders, Lia Valente and Tessa Hill, started a Change.org petition to get the notion of consent discussed in health class.

That's not to say that hot topics of late like Jian Ghomeshi, Bill Cosby and Rehtaeh Parsons haven't played a part in creating an environment that made this kind of thing seem necessary. If Ghomeshi had been taught about consent from the age of six, maybe he wouldn't currently be awaiting trial; or maybe he's just a sociopath, but it would have been worth a try, wouldn't it?

Not everyone thinks so. Every time the topic of sex education in Ontario schools comes up, there's a backlash featuring a lot of tired, outdated, head-in-the-sand objections from conservatives.

In fact, in 2010, then-Premier Dalton McGuinty tried to push a similar program forward but kowtowed to pressure from people such as Charles McVety, head of Canada Christian College, who started a petition against the proposed curriculum and got over 100,000 signatures — McGuinty withdrew the lesson plans. I'm hoping Wynne has bigger ovaries than McGuinty. McVety is all hot and bothered (angry, not aroused) this time around, too.

"We abhor the premier announcing that Ontario's teachers will be forced to teach little children how to give permission ... to engage in sex." I'm abhorred by the fact that a "good" Christian actually thinks teachers will be telling six-year-olds to engage in sex. That is not the plan. As Wynne put it, "Starting right in the ... junior grades, kids will be learning listening skills and helping each other to pay attention to facial expressions and ... whether somebody is positive or negative or happy or sad."

These are skills one could teach in a number of ways; I don't think any Grade 1 teachers will be digging out the dildos or inflating any sexy blow-up dolls. Consent is applicable in many life situations. I once had a co-worker who enjoyed foisting her "famous rice pilaf" on me — wow, do I ever wish she'd had a lesson in reading facial expressions and for that matter, gag reflexes.

Parents who don't want their kids exposed to the idea of sex at school forget that their kids have another teacher today: The Internet.

Valente and Hill are living in the present, among all the other students from coast-to-coast who can turn on their laptop to watch a gang-bang, under the veil of porn, for sexual entertainment purposes. This stuff makes Penthouse Magazine look like it should be included on the same bookshelf as Goodnight Moon.

Joe Warmington at the Toronto Sun wasn't keen on the fact that Premier Wynne had taken advice from middle-school students.

"A lecture about sex ed from 13-year-olds in a country where legal consent is 16?"

Yes, Joe! That's the point. The fact that 13-year-olds who are not even legally able to consent already know that consent, or lack of it, is an issue today is indicative of the fact that there's a really big problem. Like, come on.

McVety and Warmington aren't alone in their disdain for this development.

Reading blogs and comments on news articles and social media, one will see a lot of sentiments like, "That's too young to start broaching the topic of sex." "Schools should only teach abstinence," "Leave it to the parents to teach kids about sex."

Well, those ideas are all fine and dandy if you live where the Care Bears live, but we live on Earth among humans who can at times be ignorant and dangerous.

And can we take it, from recent events, that parents are teaching their kids about consent? To a parent who wants to do it themselves, I ask this: While you might be teaching your daughter about consent, what if your neighbour is not teaching his son the same principles?

January is shaking its bad rap

Analysis. The month formerly known as the place bad movies go to die has offered some surprisingly good fare in recent memory

Traditional wisdom has it that January is a dumping ground for bad movies.

"Everyone is broke after shelling out for Christmas presents," the studios say. "The weather is crappy and anyone leaving the house is going to the gym instead of the movies," complain the suits.

That's why clunkers like One for the Money, a Katherine Heigl crime drama with a two per cent Rotten Tomatoes rating and Season of the Witch — which saw Nicolas Cage go all medieval on the forces of evil and strain his credibility as an actor — made the lives of critics and audiences miserable on long, cold winter nights in bygone Januaries.

Why waste good movies when no one was likely to go?

Years ago studios threw the odd quality film into the January mix — Traffic, Good Will Hunting, Before Sunrise, Dr. Strangelove and Silence of the Lambs — but every good movie like Matinee (92 per cent on RT) was balanced out with a stinker like Body of Evidence and its paltry six per cent rating.

There is still that yin and yang as last week's releases of The Boy Next Door and Mortdecai (two movies that will decorate Worst Of the Year lists) proves,

Michael Bay strategically chose to release his time-travel story, Project Almanac, this month. CONTRIBUTED

In Focus

but the tide seems to be changing.

Perhaps that's why Project Almanac, a time-travel drama from producer Michael Bay, moved from a prime July release date to the barren January slate.

Surely Bay, as savvy a player as Hollywood has, wouldn't allow his movie to be tossed out with the trash.

The reason given for the schedule move was that Bay himself wanted to sprinkle some of his Transformers' fairy dust to pump up the film's appeal to young audiences.

But it's also apparent that a micro-budget movie like Project Almanac, even with Bay's name attached, could get lost in a summer filled with large-scale offerings like Dawn of the Planet of the Apes, so why not release in a less crowded, but increasingly profitable field?

What used to be a time to fill screens with borderline cheesefests has become a viable month to release a movie.

Last year big crowds braved the polar vortex to help the Kevin Hart comedy Ride Along set a January opening record.

This year the Oscar-nominated Selma and Still Alice have opened wide in a month usually reserved for Golden Raspberry winners.

Perhaps the biggest story of 2015 so far is the success of Clint Eastwood's Chris Kyle biopic, American Sniper, which has raked in upwards of $170 million in just two weeks.

The success of that film is as strong an indicator as Hollywood needs that January is no longer a no-go zone.

Costner film poses questions about racism

Interview. Actor used his own money to fund a simple story that made him feel 'more empowered'

LIZ
BROWN
liz.brown@metronews.ca

Quoted

"To say you're colour-blind is disingenuous. You do see differences. The key is to understand those differences."

Kevin Costner

Kevin Costner made the racially-charged drama Black or White happen.

In his latest film, he plays Elliot, a recently widowed alcoholic lawyer battling for the custody of his biracial granddaughter, Eloise.

His rival is Rowena (Octavia Spencer), Eloise's paternal grandmother, who thinks she should move from the richest part of Los Angeles to the "black" neighbourhood with her.

But the film doesn't pick sides. "It really impressed me how even-handed the film was," says Costner.

Indeed, every one of Eloise's potential guardians is battling a personal demon of some kind. "I just thought it was an honest story from the very first page. I felt like I was reading something really authentic," he adds.

Costner was so drawn to the script, written by his old The Upside of Anger filmmaker, Mike Binder, that he wound up financing it to ensure it hit the big screen. When no one else came round, he put up his own money — some $9 million of it. "I was hoping other people would rush to the movie and see the same potential and value in it that I did, but unfortunately that didn't happen," he says.

Not that his character is some white saviour, or even that good. Elliot's battles with Rowena betray his own prejudices.

He thinks Eloise is already "living in one of the safest neighbourhoods in L.A.," he boasts, and shouldn't move to Rowena's part of the city.

"Elliot was comfortable in that environment, visiting and socializing with Eloise's family, but he instinctually still thought his granddaughter would be safer with him," says Costner.

Still, the movie subtly condemns his stance. "Racism doesn't have to be overt. This is where the veil of racism is lifted, when he thinks she wouldn't be safe in that 'other' neighbourhood."

"But Elliot travels far in this movie and comes to understand himself better," he adds.

It was a bit of a parallel for Costner who adds that examining those covert attitudes in a narrative made him feel "more empowered."

"People say they're colour-blind when they want to explain they are without prejudice. But to say you're colour-blind is disingenuous. You do see differences. The key is to understand those differences."

The tale may not have been epic enough for big Hollywood studios to take notice, but Costner hopes that audiences will at least be surprised by the film and the things it says.

"It's a simple story about life," he says. "It doesn't solve anything. It's about the well-being of a child and what's best for the child and race shouldn't be rolled into those sorts of things."

I, Rewa Kriti, daughter of Mithilesh Pandey, born on 02/25/04 residing at #204 2203 44 Ave. Edmonton Alberta T6T0T1, Canada, have legally changed my name in Edmonton Alberta on 01/30/15 and shall henceforth be known as Rewa Pandey.

Splashy ads grab major YouTube views

Super Bowl ads.

Canadians go online to watch the commercials they can't see on TV

SMITH CROSS
Metro in Toronto

Searching the Internet for the American Super Bowl commercials Canadians don't get on TV on has become a national pastime, but that's about to change.

Five years of Google search data shows that every year, more Canadians search Google for Super Bowl commercials than Americans and our searches outnumber our giant neighbour to the south the most around game day, when Canadian broadcasters have been subbing out splashy American ads for Canadian ones.

That hunger for American ads is why the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission announced Thursday it will stop

A Victoria's Secret 90-second teaser ad showed supermodels fully dressed as football players, although the actual Super Bowl ad shows the models dressed in Victoria's Secret lingerie. VICTORIA'S SECRET/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadian broadcasters from subbing in Canadian ads for American ones during the Super Bowl as of 2017.

"The best commercials are coming from the U.S. where they have more skin in the game, given what they're paying for advertising," said Kenneth Wong, Professor of Marketing at Queen's School of Business.

In the meantime, it's become more important for Super Bowl ads to make the most of the buzz online, he said. More companies are making "teasers," which are essentially online ads for their

Super Bowl ads.

For example, Victoria's Secret filmed an online spot of its models playing football that is just as a teaser for its main ad during the game.

"When you're spending $4.5 million on a single exposure of a national ad, you want to do everything possible to make sure that ad is seen by people," Wong said. "So, you make an ad for an ad."

More than 70-million total minutes of Super Bowl ads — and teasers for ads — have been watched on YouTube so far, which is nearly triple the amount watched by this time last year, Google reports.

According to Cheri Bradish, research chair in sport marketing, Ted Rogers School of Management, the immense popularity of online Super Bowl ads goes hand-in-hand with a shift away from watching sports on TV to watching sports on other platforms.

"The paradigm is clearly shifted in how consumers, particularly young consumers, are consuming sports," she said.

5 ads worth talking about

In general, ads released online so far are on par in terms of quality, but with less emphasis on high production value than in recent years, said Wong. He believes companies find using celebrities in their ads — such as Kim Kardashian and Pierce Brosnan — a more effective way to create an impact.

- Kia Sorento. Pierce Brosnan stars as himself and gets lampooned when offered an acting part: Where he's expecting action, it's a more mundane car ad. "It's a perfect counterpoint to his James Bond image," said Wong.

- T-Mobile. Kim Kardashian, satirizes herself advertising a feature that allows T-Mobile users to save the data allowance they didn't use in a month by talking, deadpan, about all of the pictures of her they could be using it on.

- Wix.com. Wong's pick for best ad so far. Retired football players use Wix.com to easily build websites to jumpstart their wacky choices of second careers.

For example, Brett Farve gets into charcuterie, and builds favreandcarve.com, which exists in real life.

- Carl's Jr. This ad showing model Charlotte McKinney walking apparently naked through a farmers market has faced criticism for using sex to sell burgers.

- GoDaddy. GoDaddy pulled its ad featuring a puppy mill using GoDaddy to host its website after it caused an outrage among tweeting animal rights activists.

Bieber opens up, says he was just pretending to be a doofus

A recent visit to Ellen apparently prompted Justin Bieber to take to Facebook to record a dimly lit confessional video detailing his personal insecurities about how he's come off over the past year.

And he's just trying to be Justin, guys.

"It's been a minute since I've been in a public appearance, and I didn't want to come off arrogant or conceited — basically how I've been acting the past year, year and a half," he says of his interview with Ellen DeGeneres.

"I'm not what I was pretending to be. Why I say I was pretending is, often we pretend to be something we're not, as a cover-up of what we're truly feeling inside. And there was a lot of feelings going on in there. ... Just being young and growing up in this business is hard. Just growing up in general is hard."

If this is how he reacts to a sit-down with DeGeneres, maybe this whole Comedy Central roast thing isn't such a great idea.

Middleton tries to prove his life isn't soft as a marshmallow

When you think of the name Middleton, you think Kate, right? Beyond that, probably Pippa. But don't forget about James. Can being the younger brother to the Duchess of Cambridge — one of the most famous women in the world — be a bit frustrating?

"Yes, it does get frustrating," James Middleton tells iPad magazine The Young Director. "I work incredibly hard — just like every other person in business and work. And aside from the fact of — yes, I am the brother of someone very important — I am, at the end of the day, just James."

So have some sympathy, you guys.

And speaking of business and work, what is it James is up to these days?

Running his startup, Boomf, which allows Instagram users to get their photos printed on marshmallows. Yes, you read that correctly.

"I have only ever employed myself," James says proudly and without a hint of irony.

2. Slowly bring back to boil and simmer gently, frequently scraping bottom of pan, until veggies tender, about 15 minutes. Add crab, corn and cream. Simmer 5 minutes. Remove thyme and adjust seasoning.

3. Meanwhile, in skillet over medium heat, cook bacon until crisp. Drain on paper towels.

4. On clean surface, slice top off each bread loaf. Using fingers, hollow out loaves, leaving 1 inch (2.5 cm) of crumb all around. Ladle hot soup into bread bowls. Sprinkle with bacon. FOLLOW RICARDO ON SOCIAL MEDIA AND ON RICARDOCUISINE.COM OR SUBSCRIBE TO HIS MAGAZINE'S ENGLISH EDITION, WHICH LAUNCHED IN 2014.

Chowder's liquid partner

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell

liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Pairing wine with liquid-centric meals can be tricky business — even when it comes to a heartier, protein-based staple like chowder.

Though populated with chunks of seafood, this classic winter warmer still has fluidity that can water down a wine.

As with any food and wine pairing, use the ingredient that has the most influence in the dish as your guide.

In Chef Ricardo's Crab Chowder recipe, featured this week, it's a combination of the shellfish and the creaminess of the broth.

Both components work best with a white wine.

The apple fruit found in a glass of German Riesling will make a great partner, as would a French or New World Chardonnay, especially one that highlights the grape's rich mouth-feel rather than oak aging.

Louis Latour's 2012 Bourgogne Chardonnay ($19.95 - $26.79) is aged in stainless steel, putting the focus on its bright flavour profile which will work wonders with the recipe's creamy texture and the sweetness of the crab meat.

Seattle Super Seven Dip. Snack for the Seahawks

In a medium bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the cream cheese until light and fluffy. Add the milk, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating until smooth and fluffy. Stir in the sour cream, then set aside.

In a medium skillet over medium, heat 1 tablespoon of the olive oil. Add the onion and cook, stirring frequently, until well browned and caramelized, about 15 to 20 minutes. If the onion begins to stick, add a tablespoon of water and continue to cook. Set aside.

In a medium bowl, combine the cabbage and chives. In another bowl, whisk together the jam, vinegar, a pinch each of salt and pepper, the remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil, and a splash of hot sauce.

To assemble the dip, spread the crab over the bottom of a large, shallow baking dish. Drizzle with the teriyaki sauce. Spread the whipped cream cheese over the crab, spreading evenly to the edge of the bowl. Spread the caramelized onions evenly over the cream cheese, then top with the chopped smoked mussels. If making ahead, wrap and refrigerate for

SUPER BOWL XLIX

The Seattle Super Seven Dip, left, is made with teriyaki-seasoned Dungeness crabmeat, cream cheese, caramelized onions, smoked mussels, purple cabbage slaw and blackberry vinaigrette. It takes about 30 minutes to make. The New England dip is made with barbecued pulled pork, sautéed apples and butter. It takes about 1-1/2 hours. Both dips serve 16 people. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New England Super Seven Dip. Pig out for the Patriots

In a medium saucepan over medium heat, combine the pork tenderloin with the broth. Bring to a simmer, then cover and cook until very tender, about 45 minutes. Discard the broth. Using 2 forks, shred the meat, then transfer to a medium bowl. Add the barbecue sauce and toss until coated.

While the pork cooks, prepare the other ingredients. In a medium bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the cream cheese until light and fluffy. Add the milk, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating until smooth and fluffy. Stir in the sour cream, then set aside.

In a medium skillet over medium-high heat, melt the butter. Add the apples and cook until just tender. In a small bowl, stir together the corn kernels, scallions and hot sauce.

To assemble the dip, spread the corn mixture over the bottom of a large, shallow baking dish. Top with the pork, then with the apples. Spread the whipped cream cheese evenly over the apples, spreading to the edge.

HEALTH AND WELLNESS

Breathe easier for a healthier you

Stressed out? You aren't alone.

Statistics Canada reports that in 2013, 23 per cent of Canadians reported feeling "quite a lot" of life stress. To breathe easier, you might want to try meditation, which often begins with guided exercises.

"Guided meditation can be used to begin developing a meditation practice," said Dr. Patricia Rockman, a family physician and director of education and clinical services at the Centre for Mindfulness Studies in Toronto.

A practitioner guides you through the meditation, telling you to breathe, to pay attention to specific feelings or body parts, and to quiet your mind.

Some guided meditations use visualization — imagine a calming beach or a reassuring mountain peak — to help people distance themselves from stressful thoughts. In mindfulness-based meditation, which is often used in cognitive behavioural therapy to treat depression and anxiety, "The guidance is used not so much to calm people, as to train them to focus their attention and regulate their emotions," Rockman said.

There are many downloadable guided meditations, but a creative alternative is to record your own so it's perfect for you. All you need is a quiet spot and a recording device, such as the one on your smartphone.

First, decide on the intention of your meditation. Is it stress-busting? Confidence building? Once you have a goal, write the script.

"Use invitational language, language that is kind, language that is focused in the present," Rockman said.

Avoid direct commands. Instead, try phrases like "bringing your attention to your hand."

Second, give yourself some breathing room.

"Make sure there's enough space in between speaking," Rockman said. "This gives people the chance to experience what they're experiencing."

When using DIY-guided meditation, make sure you are comfortable. Increase your meditation time gradually, Rockman said.

Customized experience at Vision by Design

Vision by Design Optometry is a boutique-style Optometry office located in Callowood Shopping Centre in West Edmonton. Vision by Design believes in customizing the eye care experience to meet each patient's specific needs.

"We've brought in cutting-edge technology that gives us images of the retina similar to taking an MRI. It actually allows us to view deeper tissues of the eye that may not be visible with traditional testing," says practice owner Dr. Sarah Keep, who adds that "we've have multiple cases where early signs of glaucoma, diabetes and macular degeneration have been detected with this instrumentation that would have likely been missed otherwise."

The customized experience doesn't stop at the eye exam. The opticians are trained extensively in finding eyewear that best suits a patient's facial features, skin tone and personal style.

"Eye wear should be fun. It's something that you wear on your face every day, so it has to look amazing." One of their most frequent complaints from patients is trouble using progressive lenses. To solve this problem, they brought in specialized instruments which manipulate the doctor's prescription based on the patient's specific visual needs. It measures eye rotation, head and eye movement and reading distances, resulting in lenses with less distortion and glare. "This instrumentation eliminates a lot of the trouble that patients have with progressives. It's amazing what we are able to do with the technology available today," Dr. Keep adds.

Eyewear as unique as you are.

Cleanse the toxins out of your body

Different types to suit your health needs

Toxins are all around us: in our food, our environment, our water and even produced inside our body. The body is equipped to deal with toxins however we are bombarding our organs with more toxic load than ever in history. So is doing a cleanse something for you, or something you've been thinking about (especially after the indulgent holiday season)?

Many people avoid cleansing because they think it involves fasting or strict dietary restrictions. The good news is that you don't have to follow extreme diets in order to cleanse your body because there are many herbal cleansing formulations designed to work regardless of diet or lifestyle.

But given the number of cleanses that are available these days, how do you select one that's right for you? Look for a total body cleanse that supports each of the body's seven channels of elimination since these organs work together to detoxify the body. These channels are: the liver, lungs, blood, skin, kidneys, lymphatic system and lungs.

Also, look for a mild cleanse if it's your first time doing one and one that's free of harsh psyllium fibre and habit-forming laxatives, such as cascara sagrada and/or senna.

Here are some examples of cleanses you can find at the health food and vitamin store Simply Health:

- First Cleanse is formulated specifically for the 'first time' or 'sensitive' cleanser. This 15 day cleanse eases the body into the process of cleansing.

- CleanseSMART is one for you if you're prone to constipation or have cleansed before.

This 30-day program works without harsh ingredients or the need to follow a strict diet.

- Rapid Cleanse is a seven-day total body cleanse with added fibre for those times when you don't have the time to perform a longer cleanse or would like to cleanse on a more frequent basis.

Cleansing the bad stuff out of your body and adding the good stuff back in is the first step towards optimal health this year and beyond.

PROBIOTIC SUPPLEMENTS

For many of today's illness and infections, antibiotics are often prescribed. However, too much antibiotic intake will upset the balance of "good" and "bad" bacteria in your gut and this is why more and more health care professionals are recommending people take a daily probiotic supplement. Probiotics, which are live bacteria and yeasts, replenish the good bacteria in the gut to can help boost your immunity, improve your digestion, improve overall health and even help ease more acute conditions such as skin conditions such as eczema or even a cold.

But what kind should you choose? While you can speak to the customer service provider at Simply Health, it's generally a good idea to look for a capsule that has 50 billion bacteria per capsule. That sounds like a lot, that's the idea amount for most people. Also, look for a product that is enteric coated to survive through the harsh environment of the stomach.

Variety of dances to get you moving

After square dancing for over 10 years, Ron Fishburne and his wife know what you get from square dancing. “We enjoy the social aspect, the fellowship and friendship that goes with it,” says Fishburne, past-president of the Edmonton & District Square Dance Association (EDSDA). “And we get a lot of exercise out of it too.”

If square dancing isn't what you're after, the EDSDA has a range of dance forms to try out: round dancing, a style that's much like ballroom dance since dancers progress around the floor to various rhythms including waltz, foxtrot, two-step, cha-cha or jive; clogging, or Appalachian mountain step dancing, which is similar to line dancing; and square dancing, a partner dance which is done in a square.

Learning the basic steps in any of the dance programs is relatively easy since experienced instructors will teach you the moves and you practice those moves until they feel just right. “For new people, give it a month to enjoy and get the feel for it,” says Fishburne. “We also suggest going to other callers to mix with other people and get used to it. The extra practise really helps.”

Inner peace in focus at Star of the North Retreat Centre

Peace is the word that comes to mind at the Star of the North Retreat Centre.

“People come seeking a deeper relationship with God and the peace that comes with that,” says Lucie Leduc, the St. Albert-based retreat centre's executive director. “There is an ethos in the building that is peaceful so it nourishes what visitors are going to be about while they're here.”

This ecumenical centre, which has chapels, a dining hall, meeting rooms and live-in accommodations for over 50 guests on its grounds, can be home to groups looking for a place to host their meetings, and the Star offers its own programming.

“For instance, we have a women's wellness retreat each year where we offer workshops such as Art Therapy, yoga and more,” says Leduc. “It's really about offering a variety of ways that people can connect and heal spiritually and emotionally.”

And the peace visitors find here gets taken home with guests when they leave.

“It translates out — you look for ways to be in peace rather than be part of the conflict going on consistently,” says Leduc.

HAIR LOSS SOLUTIONS FOR MEN AND WOMEN

We’re all aware of how prevalent hair loss is for men, but whether due to menopause, genetics or other hormonal factors, hair loss also affects about one in four women of all ages.

At Tropicalaser, owner Maie Kellerman offers a multi-therapeutic treatment for men and women experiencing hair loss — a treatment that combines regular bio-stimulating laser treatments of the scalp (usually twice a week) with medicinal hair loss products (pills, topical solutions and shampoos).

“For about the price of a cup of coffee a day, we can impact hair loss, and clients can see new hair growth that is stronger and thicker,” said Kellerman. “And we offer financing programs that won’t hurt the pocket-book—we can work with anyone’s budget and time schedule, creating a program that is suited to their specific needs.”

Kellerman recommends that hair loss clients commit to at least a year of treatment, as optimum regrowth occurs within 1 to 2 years of treatment.

Tropicalaser works with Hair Loss Control Clinics, which is available in over 200 locations in 30 countries worldwide.

Great price and plenty of space

Dodge Grand Caravan

Although Chrysler celebrated the 30th anniversary of the introduction of its "Magic Wagons" for 2014, there's a real chance it won't be around for many more.

The next-generation minivan, arriving for 2016, will only be in Chrysler Town & Country guise. So if you are looking for the Grand Caravan's combination of a great starting price with plenty of space and decent performance, you best act fast.

Since its 2011 model-year updating, the GC drives more securely and frugally with a revised suspension topped with low-rolling-resistance tires to help prop up fuel economy.

At the same time, the interior was upgraded with new gauges and soft-touch dashboard and door-panel surfaces replacing hard plastic.

The 3.6-litre "Pentastar" V6 that was introduced at the same time produces 283 horsepower and, mated to a six-speed automatic transmission, easily runs with the minivan herd for fuel consumption.

Inside, you will find the usual dozen or so cupholders plus a variety of small-item bins and pockets (including dual glove boxes) that showcase the vehicle's utility. The standard third-row split-folding bench seat can be power folded (as an option) to create a flat load floor.

The Stow 'n' Go feature comes with a one-touch-down function and provides out-of-sight storage bins when the second-row seats are left in their upright positions.

The price-leading Canada Value Package heads the list of trim levels that also includes SXT, Crew, Crew Plus and the sporty R/T. The Canadian Value Package is one of the best deals in the land and includes most of the basic features and safety systems you would expect.

PRACTICAL & EFFICIENT

While the Avenger was a perfectly serviceable mid-size sedan, it isn't answering the call for 2015. But the tall wagon that uses its bones and engines is a much more palatable proposition and remains in production.

The Journey scores a hole-in-one as a practical, efficient and affordable carrier. It has just-right sizing going for it, which means it's more compact than a Chevrolet Traverse or Ford Explorer, but larger than a Mitsubishi Outlander.

In entry-level trim, the Journey provides seating for five people, although there is an available two-place, third-row 50:50 split bench.

There are also some other clever interior storage options such as a front passenger seat with a flip-forward hinged cushion that's ideal for concealing cameras, purses and other valuables. And all models feature two in-floor storage compartments with removable plastic liners behind the front seats that are large enough to hold a dozen beverage cans each, plus ice. And don't forget the chilled storage bin inside the glove compartment that can keep a couple of cool beverages at the ready.

The Journey uses a 173-horsepower, 2.4-litre four-cylinder with four-speed automatic in base models. Optional is a 283-horsepower, 3.6-litre V6 with a six-speed auto.

There are seven trim levels for 2015 (Canada Value Package, SE Plus, SXT, Limited, new-for-2015 Crossroad and two R/T AWD trims), which means there is likely a Journey for every taste, need and pretty much every budget.

Base Journey equipment includes air conditioning, keyless remote entry, power windows, locks and mirrors and a complete range of safety gear. Up-level models offer leather seating surfaces, roof rack, backup camera, navigation system, 19-inch wheels and a flashlight stored in the cargo area. — Wheelbase Media

Super Charger

Although no longer a member of NASCAR's various racing series, perhaps Dodge will put its latest Charger back into some stock-oriented division with the National Hot Rod Association (NHRA)? Why?

Because the NHRA confirmed that the new 2015 Charger SRT8 Hellcat can do the standing quarter-mile drag race in 11 seconds flat on street tires.

Beyond the revised suspension, new wheels and more aggressive body bits, the Hellcat's most important part is under its hood. The "normal" 470-horsepower, 6.4-litre Hemi is plenty good, but for the Hellcat it has been replaced by a 6.2-litre V8 that's augmented by a big old supercharger. Final tallies of 707 horsepower and 650 pound-feet of torque mean the Charger SRT8 is the most powerful factory-built sedan and the fastest as well, topping out at 204 mph (326 km/h).

The large 20-inch wheels with 15.4-inch Brembo brake rotors means it stops nearly as well as it accelerates, doing the zero-to-100-mph-to-zero test in a supercar-rivalling sub-13-second time.

Amazingly, the Hellcat uses the same eight-speed automatic as the other engines, although bulked up to handle twice the power. Those other engines carry over from before — the base 3.6-litre V6 still has 300 horsepower while the 370-horsepower 5.7-litre V8 comes as standard equipment in the Charger R/T.

The interior has a new steering wheel, dash, gauge cluster and better materials all around. For additional rumbling noises, you can select the Beats by Dr. Dre audio package. The rap artist helped tune the optional 10-speaker sound system to complement the Charger's interior and the musical tastes of its generally more youthful passengers.

Step into a big-rig Sierra HD

Selecting a big-rig Sierra over a similar Chevrolet Silverado HD mostly boils down to which body style you prefer since both pickups are identical beneath their new-for-2015 shiny sheet metal.

However, one other important difference is that the GMC offers the luxury-laden Denali crew cab, in addition to the base, SLE and SLT trim levels. Chevrolet doesn't.

The usual cab styles return, but the extended cab is replaced by a new double cab with rear doors that are hinged at the front. Both the 66-inch and 96-inch cargo boxes have been strengthened and the rear bumper has built-in recessed steps at the corners for easier bed access.

All HD powertrains return unaltered for 2015. The base 6.0-litre gasoline V8 generates 360 horsepower and 380 pound-feet of torque. It can be optioned with a compressed-natural-gas fuel system, although you lose 59 horsepower and 47 pound-feet in the process.

For serious grunt work, there is the optional 6.6-litre turbo-diesel V8 rated at 397 horsepower and 765 pound-feet of torque. Both employ six-speed automatic transmissions: A GM-developed Hydramatic comes with the 6.0; and the turbo-diesel employs an Allison-built unit.

Chevy mates its "smart exhaust brake system" to the turbo diesel that, when the vehicle is coasting, holds compressed exhaust gases inside the engine's cylinders, creating resistance, which in turn slows down the truck without touching the brakes. The result is less wear and tear on the brake hardware and greater control for the driver, especially when hauling or towing heavy loads downhill.

Included is a stability program that reduces a trailer's tendency to wobble about, while hill-start assist prevents the HD from rolling backward when on an incline.

For the 2015 model year, the HD's maximum hauling capacity has increased to 3,508 kilograms from 3,275 and conventional towing capacity has similarly increased to 8,890 kilograms from 8,165. Fifth-wheel capacity is up to 10,525 from 10,200.

BOLD AND AGGRESSIVE GMC ACADIA

The GMC Acadia is a bold and aggressive choice against its more wallflower-like global rivals.

It can be had in either regular or ultra-lux Denali grade, but either way the squared-off front end takes inspiration from the smaller Terrain and uses neat LED accent lighting in the headlight clusters. LED tail lights, wraparound glass and a spoiler freshen up the rear end.

All Acadias come with either seven or eight seats, depending on the configuration, and lots of room behind the third row for cargo. The second- and third-row seats can be folded flat for more storage, and, when upright, the second row slides fore and aft with one-hand operation.

There's also a raft of safety features such as side-curtain airbags that run the length of the cabin, an exclusive front centre airbag, anti-lock brakes and anti-rollover software.

The 2013 addition of blind-spot and cross-traffic warning systems is complemented by forward collision alert and lane departure warnings, which are available on every trim, but standard for Denali.

A carryover 288-horsepower, 3.6-litre V6 drives the front wheels (all-wheel-drive is optional) through a six-speed automatic transmission.

Contrary to what you might know about front-wheel-drive, the Acadia can still tow up to 2,000 kilograms (a decent-sized travel trailer or a boat).

GMC's luxu Denali sub-brand gets unique badges, grille, body pieces, high-intensity-discharge (HID) headlights, new-style 20-inch wheels and dual exhaust, while the cabin gets special heated and cooled leather seats, a new heated leather-wrapped steering wheel (that's also standard on top Denali trims), higher-quality trimmings, a huge dual-panel moonroof, tri-zone climate control, a top-end audio system and a rear-seat DVD player with two screens.

GMC Terrain. CONTRIBUTED

UPGRADE TO THE TERRAIN DENALI

If you don't find the regular Terrain flashy enough, GMC has just the ticket for you. The ultra-luxurious Denali sub-brand is available on this, its smallest vehicle. More chrome on the broad grille and exhaust pipes, satin touches, unique lights and body-coloured fascias and rocker moldings highlight the exterior, while softer leather for the seats, doors and steering wheel, along with "smoked" mahogany inserts differentiate the cabin from lesser trims.

Unusual for a Denali, however, the Terrain version can be had with either the base 182-horsepower, 2.4-litre four-cylinder or the 301-horsepower 3.6-litre V6.

All GMC Terrains get six-speed automatic transmissions and both engines can be had with front- or optional all-wheel-drive.

Tucked away in a closet upstairs at Capital GMC Buick Cadillac in Regina SK, is a Melfort Mustangs hockey jersey. A reminder of how far the Capital Automotive Group and President, Bruce Axelson, has come.

Bruce has spent the majority of his life working in the automotive industry, recalling the first job he ever had at a dealership in Price Albert SK, "I got a job at a Chrysler dealership when I was 14. I spent every waking hour that I could there, every day after school, every Saturday, every holiday, all I did was work at that dealership. It was fun, they were good to me."

It was the mid 1960's when Bruce decided to move to Regina to sell cars, and within a year found himself promoted to sales manager. "I was quite young and probably not qualified for the job but I was a reasonable sales person, and I wore clean clothes." By 1974, Bruce was ready to buy his first dealership, a Chevrolet Oldsmobile store, which was located in Melfort Saskatchewan. He kept that store for 27 years, and operated it for close to 20. In 1992, Bruce returned to Regina and purchased another GM store, Capital GMC Buick Cadillac and ten years later, his first Ford store, Capital Ford Regina. In 2007, the auto group expended facilities, building 3 new structures in the Northwest of Regina known as the Capital Auto Mall. The mall is the home of two national award winning automotive dealerships, as well as Saskatchewan's largest body shop, Universal Collision and Autospa. It is 170,000 square feet of buildings on 25 acres of land. In 1992, Capital dealership staff count was close to 65 employees. Now today's combined total is 500. "A lot of families count on us every month to put a little bread on the table and we consider that quite a responsibility, and we enjoy it" said Axelson.

In the summer of 2014 Capital Automotive Group was proud to announce the purchase of Southgate GMC Buick in Edmonton Alberta, and look forward to building on the success in a new market. "It's the culture that makes the Capital Auto Group. I think we have empathy and I think we're sensitive to peoples needs. We have to remember we're in the transportation business and people have a different feeling about an automobile than they do about most things in their lives. If your fridge breaks, big deal, don't buy milk that day, but it's different when you sell a car or need a new one. It's an emotional experience and we understand that. We'll always respect your time and your investment.

Capital began renovations on its new store in Edmonton (9751 34 Avenue) in September 2014 and are looking forward to completion shortly, which will include a grand opening, Spring 2015. The Group is proud to be represented by the local Capital team that has been assembled in Edmonton and Alberta customers have a lot to look forward to. Non commission sales staff, no hassle pricing and premium trade in evaluations are just a few reasons for the success of the Group in sales. As for service and parts, we recognize that is where relationships are strengthened or lost. We are very proud of the service and parts team in Edmonton, they make the commitment to respect our customers time. "I think when people buy a car, they've got a lot of choices. Where to buy the car, the brand of car they want to buy, all manufacturers make good cars and every car dealer has a nice building, so we try to make the experience one that is fair and respectful both ways. There has to be a mutual respect and acceptance of the transaction and it has to be good for everybody. Not just good for the dealer, and not just good for the customer, good for everybody. We think that fairness is a real important part of what we do." Capital GMC Buick in Edmonton invites you to visit the new showroom and facility at the corner of 34th & 97th. "The coffee is always on, we would love the opportunity to show you around and we can help you get into a new GMC or Buick too".

Mercedes-Benz C-Class. CONTRIBUTED

RE-ENERGIZED C-CLASS

With the arrival of the CLA-Class for 2014, the new C-Class moves up to a more elevated perch on the Mercedes-Benz family tree.

Along with a promotion, the sedan (new coupe, wagon, plug-in hybrid and performance AMG versions will follow later in calendar year 2015) has been resized and re-energized.

C-Class passengers and their gear are enclosed in a completely new skin that Mercedes says is 70 kilograms lighter than before, thanks to more aluminum body panels. Total weight has been reduced by about 100 kilograms.

An interior makeover includes well bolstered seats and a wood-trimmed control panel. The toggle-style gear-shift lever is located on the steering column and in its former location on the console is a controller with a unique touch pad. It allows your fingers to zoom or reduce (pinch) and select the various menu items, including infotainment, communications and climate systems that are shown on a dash-mounted tablet-style screen that juts out from the dashboard.

The C300 has a turbocharged 241-horsepower, 2.0-litre four-cylinder engine while the C400 gets a 329-horsepower twin-turbo 3.0-litre V6. Both engines are matched to seven-speed automatic transmissions.

All models come with "Agility Select" that includes Comfort, Eco, Sport and Sport+ settings for the engine, transmission and suspension. And then there's an "individual" setting to fine-tune those preferences.

Mercedes-Benz's 4MATIC permanent all-wheel-drive system is standard on C300 and C400 models. The C300 arrives with climate control, leather-covered seats (16-way power-adjustable in front and split-folding in back), electric parking brake and keyless push-button start.

The C400 carries about the same basic content but adds sportier AMG exterior trim and 18-inch AMG wheels (17-inch alloys for the C300). From there, leading-edge luxury options include a sport suspension, panoramic sunroof and 590-watt, 13-speaker Burmester-brand audio system. You can also add the latest high-tech safety gear designed for maximum collision and injury avoidance with other vehicles and pedestrians.

GLA gives you a choice

The GLA gives entry-level Mercedes-Benz shoppers a clear choice. Those preferring the slinkiness of the CLA sedan can take that route, while the more practically minded can opt for the GLA's added carrying capacity. Both vehicles appear similar from the windshield forward, but otherwise go their separate ways.

The GLA is taller and more squared off, but minus a trunk it is a significant 20 centimetres shorter. The base GLA250 runs with a turbocharged 2.0-litre four-cylinder that generates 208 horsepower and 258 pound-feet of torque. Step up to the GLA45 AMG and those values increase to 355 horsepower and 332 pound-feet.

The AMG's engine block has been strengthened and its turbocharger produces nearly twice the boost of the GLA250. That results in a zero-to-100-km/h time of five seconds, versus a more leisurely 7.3 for the GLA250 (as measured by Mercedes-Benz).

Each power plant uses a seven-speed automated manual transmission with paddle shifters that produces quicker upshifts and downshifts than a traditional automatic that comes with a torque converter.

The GLA250 comes with M-B's 4MATIC all-wheel-drive that directs up to 50 per cent of the torque to the rear wheels, as needed. The GLA45 AMG also comes standard with AWD.

Base GLAs include a power liftgate, power driver's seat with memory and an autonomous braking system that slows down or even stops the vehicle if you neglect to react to slower or stopped traffic in front.

ENTRY-LEVEL SEDAN OPENS THE DOOR

Who says an entry-level car has to look or feel entry level?

The Mercedes-Benz CLA's sporty body cladding and other trim makes it appear far from a stripped-down basic-transportation module, despite being Mercedes-Benz's starter sedan.

Other than being pulled by the front wheels (with all-wheel-drive being optional), what's most unusual about the CLA is that it doesn't offer the kind of roomy practicality that's a given when it comes to nearly every mid-size sedan. That's because Mercedes stylists drew their inspiration from the larger CLS-class faux coupe that remains one of the most imitated models on the planet (see Aston Martin Rapide, Volkswagen CC, Audi A7 and Ford Fusion).

The base CLA250 comes with a turbocharged 2.0-litre four-cylinder that produces 208 horsepower and 258 pound-feet of torque at an engine speed that's just above idle. This helps propel the car to 100 km/h from rest in a quick 6.7 seconds, as recorded by Mercedes-Benz.

For fuel thriftiness, the CLA250 uses technology that shuts off the engine when the car comes to a stop. Once the brake pedal is released, the car starts up again.

The CLA45 AMG also features a turbocharged 2.0, except that the block has been strengthened and a higher-output turbocharger produces nearly twice the boost of the CLA250. The result is a stout 355 horsepower and 322 pound-feet of torque. That's an astounding 177 horsepower per litre of displacement, while a Corvette is less than half of that at 73.

The AMG shaves the CLA's zero-to-100-km/h times by 2.1 seconds. Both models use a seven-speed automated manual transmission with paddle shifters, but the AMG adds standard 4MATIC all-wheel-drive that sends up to 50 per cent of the torque to the rear wheels, as needed. 4MATIC is available as an option on the regular-strength CLA250.

For 2015, all CLAs come with Collision Prevention Assist that signals if the car is approaching a vehicle ahead too rapidly and will independently apply braking force should the driver fail to do so.

CHEVY BEEFS UP THE SILVERADO HD

IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN NEARLY EVERY ASPECT

With the year-old Silverado 1500 series, Chevrolet did its homework and paid close attention to what buyers were looking for to haul and tow their stuff.

It looks familiar, but there are more powerful/efficient engines, as well as improvements in nearly every other area.

In front, the twin stacked headlights remain, but the grille is now much more prominent and tougher looking.

Behind the tailgate, the handy corner step bumper has recessed footholds that, combined with built-in handholds inside the box, make accessing the bed much easier.

All body styles — regular, extended Double Cab (featuring front-hinged rear doors with outside handles) and four-door Crew Cab — are attached to reworked frames with more high-strength steel, extra bracing for stiffness and improved body mounts that help isolate road noise and vibration.

You can order the Crew Cab with a longer 80-inch (203-centimetre) bed (the standard bed is 68 inches/172 centimetres) version and you will get a choice of three new all-aluminum engines.

The entry point is a 4.3-litre V6 that has the same displacement as the previous V6, but output has significantly increased to 285 horsepower and 305 pound-feet of torque from 195/260.

Optional is a 5.3-litre V8 with 355 horses and 383 pound-feet. An available 6.2-litre V8 is rated at 420 horsepower and 440 pound-feet of torque. It shares much of its guts with the Corvette engine and for 2015 also gets the Corvette's eight-speed automatic transmission. The other two engines carry over with six-speed automatics.

The model range also extends to include a premium High Country model to appeal to wealthy ranchers and city slickers. The best part about this truck is its highly optioned leather interior that places it above the previous top-of-the-line LTZ.

Also available for Silverado's sophomore year is a built-in Wi-Fi hot spot to allow all aboard access to the Internet. There is also Siri Eyes Free, which is Apple's voice-control software that can run many of the vehicle's functions without the driver taking their hands off the steering wheel.

Refreshing the Malibu inside and out

It has been a couple years since Chevrolet redesigned the 2013 Malibu following criticism for the car's lack of rear seat room.

For 2014, Chevrolet rolled forward all the changes it had planned for the Malibu's mid-cycle update, probably two years earlier than planned. Exterior changes included a more aggressive grille and lower fascia, although the Camaro-inspired tail lights and rear end remained unchanged.

Inside, the Malibu's stylists appeared to have gone all out to improve on the previous update. A redesigned centre console provided more room and storage, while engineers somehow used black magic to deliver another 3.2 centimetres of rear legroom without altering the exterior dimensions.

Standard on all but the base model is Chevrolet's MyLink touch-screen audio/communications system with a faceplate that pivots upward to reveal a hidden 15-centimetre-deep storage area.

The base engine remains a 2.5-litre four-cylinder that produces 197 horsepower, although it features direct fuel injection and a system that shuts off the engine when the vehicle is at rest, then fires it up when the brake pedal is released. The latter, all by itself, is estimated to help fuel efficiency by five per cent.

Optional is an updated turbocharged

2.0-litre four-cylinder rated at 259 horsepower and 295 pound-feet of torque.

New for 2015 is an OnStar-based mobile internet Wi-Fi hot spot so that all aboard can get online whenever they want. — Wheelbase Media

CLEVER TOUCHES FOR THE EQUINOX

Even after five years, the Chevrolet Equinox is "just right" for plenty of folks. Clever touches abound in the design, like the integrated rocker panels in the doors that reduce entry step-up height.

The interior is likely the Equinox's best asset. It's simply gorgeous and includes dual gloveboxes, easy-to-read twin gauges set in large pods and plenty of handy storage bins. There's also a versatile split folding rear seat that can be adjusted fore and aft over an eight-inch range to optimize legroom or cargo capacity. A 182-horsepower, 2.4-litre four-cylinder reigns as a base engine.

FUNKY STYLING, FRUGAL PRICE TAG

KIA SOUL IS A WINNER

Few cars are ever considered groundbreaking, but that pretty much sums up the Soul. It's the kind of vehicle that other automakers would give anything to have in their stable.

Funky styling, a frugal price tag and fuel-saving ways have made it a winner.

For 2015, Kia upgraded and slightly enlarged the cabin for more front head and shoulder room and added a bit more rear legroom. In addition, the dashboard was revised to accommodate an available 20-centimetre touch screen. The platform was made 29 per cent stiffer and accommodates a suspension that was re-engineered for improved ride and handling.

Outside, design details inspired by the Soul-based Trax'ster concept provided the basis for a front and rear facelift that makes the Soul much more appealing. The rear liftgate was made six centimetres wider and is now flanked by one of the coolest set of tail lights ever installed on any vehicle.

The entry-level LX Soul is equipped with a 1.6-litre, four-cylinder that produces 130 horsepower and 118 pound-feet of torque, while the optional 2.0-litre, four-cylinder in the EX and SX models delivers the same 164 horses and 151 pound-feet of torque.

Base Souls feature air conditioning, but not when the manual transmission is ordered, plus all the usual power amenities. Optional is a panorama-style sunroof and leather seats (heated and ventilated in front), along with a navigation system and premium Infinity-brand sound package.

Load up a Soul and you are looking at close to $30,000 — count an extra $200 for any colour other than black or white.

Under the heading of "big news," the Soul EV arrives for 2015 with an electric motor rated at 109 horsepower and 210 pound-feet of torque and an EPA-rated range of about 150 kilometres before its lithium-ion-polymer batteries need recharging. — Wheelbase Media

Kia Forte. CONTRIBUTED

THE COMFORT OF A FORTE

The Forte sedan and hatch models were redesigned for 2014 and sail into 2015 unaltered. Kia star stylist Peter Schreyer, who has a knack for creating organically shaped sheet metal that clicks with buyers, oversaw the design for both vehicles, in addition to the sporty Forte Koup.

The base sedan runs with 1.8-litre four-cylinder that pumps out 145 horsepower and 130 pound-feet of torque, while an optional 2.0-litre four-cylinder produces 173 horsepower and 154 pound-feet.

For Forte5 hatchback buyers, the 2.0 is standard while a turbocharged 1.6-litre four-cylinder is optional. It spools out 201 horsepower and 195 pound-feet of torque. A six-speed manual transmission is standard for all, while a six-speed automatic is optional.

Spending time aboard the Forte or Forte5 will prove comforting for passengers and especially pleasing for the driver who faces a clearly legible, intuitively laid-out dashboard and control panel. They also have command over the level of steering effort with the Forte's optional Flex Steer system.

Sorento swaggers forth

Following a design freshening, platform stiffening and power upgrading for 2014, the Sorento swaggers forth into 2015 as cool and competent as ever. And why not, since most competing three-row wagons require a lot more coin to seal the deal.

The Sorento's stout sub-frame supports a 191-horsepower, 2.4-litre four-cylinder power plant and an optional 3.3-litre V6 producing 290-horsepower and 252 pound-feet of torque. With either engine a six-speed automatic with manual shift controls is the sole cog swapper.

The all-wheel-drive system (available with either engine) is a full-time unit that constantly varies the torque to all four wheels and can direct power to the outer wheels in high-speed turning situations for added control (known as torque vectoring).

Trim levels for 2015 are LX and EX, as well as an SX model that includes ventilated soft leather-covered seats, exclusive 19-inch wheels, blind-spot detection, power tailgate and a premium 10-speaker audio system.

SLEEK SEDAN

LINCOLN MKZ OFFERS LUXURY AND PLENTY OF SMART TECHNOLOGY

The MKZ is Lincoln's first proven result of being able to not only translate a concept car to production faithfully, but also be able to hide the Ford mechanical bits it uses under the skin.

On sale for model year 2013, the signature "waterfall" grille was replaced by a series of horizontal bars. But for real design drama you can't beat the sweep of the roofline that flows well past the rear-most roof pillar, almost to the trailing edge of the body.

The car's massive windshield and rear window glass, including the optional retractable panoramic sunroof, makes it doubtful passenger claustrophobia will pose a problem.

Inside is an ultra-sophisticated leather-covered and wood-trimmed interior, plus a floor console extending seamlessly almost the full length of the cabin.

In back, optional inflatable seatbelts for outboard riders cushion their heads and necks in the event of frontal crash.

In the suspension department, continuously adjustable shock damping, power-assisted electric steering, variable transmission-shift-mapping plus traction and stability control all combine to form Lincoln Drive Control. The result, says Lincoln, is improved ride and handling in Normal, Sport, or Comfort modes, as selected by the driver.

A push-button gear selector next to the gauges replaces the traditional floor shifter. Power plant choices consist of a 240-horsepower, 2.0-litre four-cylinder "EcoBoost" (turbocharged) four-cylinder. Optional is a 300-horsepower, 3.7-litre V6 that Ford also installs in vehicles as diverse as the Mustang and the Explorer tall wagon.

MKZ returns in an available gasoline-electric hybrid model that's fitted with a 141-horsepower, 2.0-litre four-cylinder combined with an electric motor. The net output is 188 horsepower. The turbo and the V6 come with six-speed transmissions that send torque only to the front wheels with the former, or all four wheels if the V6 is specified. The front-wheel-drive-only hybrid uses a continuously variable transmission.

The MKZ can be had with numerous crash-mitigating safety systems that prevent your participation in rear-end mishaps and keep you within your intended lane.

Status quo for the MKX

Lincoln's version of the old Ford Edge will be replaced with an all-new model within the next year or so, but otherwise there are no real changes for 2015.

Standard equipment on the Ford Edge-based Lincoln MKX includes trailer sway control and Hill Start Assist, which prevents the vehicle from rolling backward on a steep grade. A 305-horsepower, 3.7-litre V6 is the sole engine, while a six-speed automatic transmission with paddle controls handles the shifting chores. All-wheel-drive is standard.

Inside, most of the MKX's traditional switchgear — even some gauges from the dashboard and control panel — are part of the "MyLincoln Touch technology" screen. This standard system has two programmable 10.7-centimetre touch screens on either side of the speedometer, and a 20-centimetre unit located in the centre stack.

A game-controller-style "smart" button on the steering wheel operates the climate, communications, navigation, infotainment and other vehicle functions in a somewhat intuitively designed fashion. To help out, MyLincoln has colour-coded touch-sensitive controls of a type currently used in cell-phones and TV remotes, which should help give it a familiar feel. There are also touch-based slider-type controls for the audio volume and ventilation fan speed.

UNIQUE AND UPSCALE MKC WAGON

The new-for-2015 MKC faces off against the BMW X3 Mercedes-Benz GLA and other upscale car-based wagons.

Lincoln's design team began with the Ford Escape platform and created a unique and handsome shape. The MKC's luxury content ensures there will be little, if any, commonality with the Escape.

It's also quieter inside, thanks in part to Active Noise Control, which uses hidden microphones and a special control module to create opposing sound waves sent through the car's speakers that cancel out unwanted engine noises.

The system can be combined with continuously adjustable shock damping, power-assisted electric steering, variable transmission shift mapping plus traction and stability control to form Lincoln Drive Control. The result, says Lincoln, is improved ride and handling in Normal, Sport, or Comfort modes, as selected by the driver.

The base turbocharged 2.0-litre four-cylinder generates 240 horsepower and a stout 270 pound-feet of torque. The optional 2.3-litre turbo-four is rated at 285 horsepower and 300 pound-feet of torque. Each is paired with a six-speed automatic transmission with paddle-shift controls. All-wheel-drive is included regardless of which engine you choose.

Base models include dual-zone climate control, heated power-adjustable front-row leather seats, backup camera, and "Lincoln Premium Sound" with voice-activated communications and infotainment systems.

Safety features include: Front airbags; side-impact airbags; side-curtain airbags with rollover protection; anti-lock brakes; stability control with anti-rollover software

Opting for the more expensive (by about $10,000) turbo-2.3 model adds a voice-activated navigation system, heated and cooled front seats and heated rear seats, hands-free power liftgate, and blind-spot detection that detects vehicles approaching from either side on the highway.

Slinky & sensuous

The Lexus RC 350

The RC 350 coupe, Lexus's first four-passenger coupe since the SC coupe bowed out in 1999, looks like a million bucks, which makes it a pretty good deal at an estimated price of $52,000 in Canada.

The car's slinky, sensuous body features knife-edge aero styling cues, starting with its spindle-shaped grille, runs along the lower body sides and finishes with a sharply creased rear-deck spoiler.

The RC is just a bit shorter than the IS sedan, although the car's ground-hunkering stance would suggest otherwise. The cockpit is richly tailored with good-looking faux leather seats (real leather is optional) and a thick, grippy steering wheel.

The basic RC starts out with a 3.5-litre V6 that directs its 306 horsepower to the rear wheels through an eight-speed automatic transmission. You can upgrade to all-wheel-drive, but in that case a six-speed automatic is in play.

For more sporting flavour, the F Sport package, available in FWD and AWD RCs, obliges with electronically controlled variable sport suspension, high-friction brake pads and 19-inch wheels (18-inchers are standard).

Lexus RC 350. CONTRIBUTED

The F Sport's dress-up items begin with a unique front end and go on to include heated and ventilated sport front seats, power tilt/telescoping steering wheel and aluminum sport pedals and trim.

For all-out performance, the RC F (for Fuji Speedway in Japan where Toyota's Lexus branch conducts its testing) is fitted with a 467-horsepower V8 and an eight-speed transmission that has been adjusted to handle the engine's prodigious output.

The extent of equipment is long for the

RC F, but encompasses the installation of special body panels, such as a bulging hood, wider fenders, race-bred suspension components, bigger brakes and an electronic multi-mode program that allows drivers to adjust throttle and shift settings or even turn off the stability and traction controls for maximum racetrack action. – Wheelbase Media

Lexus NX. CONTRIBUTED

Hop into a rolling sculpture

If it's anonymity you are after, you should best steer clear of the NX. The vehicle has a number of unique features, including the availability of gas-electric hybrid power in addition to a standard gasoline engine.

The NX's futuristic front end is dominated by a spindle grille that's common to other vehicles in the Lexus stable. For the optional F-Sport model, the more exaggerated grille's blacked-out mesh is quite a bit more distinctive.

The NX 200t comes with an all-new turbo-charged 2.0-litre four-cylinder engine that generates 235 horsepower and 258 pound-feet of torque.

The NX 300h hybrid combines a 154-horsepower, 2.5-litre four-cylinder and a 141-horsepower electric helper motor for a combined 194 horses and an estimated 200 pound-feet of torque.

The NX 200t uses a six-speed automatic transmission to direct power to either the front or all four wheels, while the NX 300h employs a continuously variable unit (CVT).

The available all-wheel-drive (or all-weather-drive in Lexus-speak) on NX 200t directs torque to just the front wheels when cruising, but can send up to 50 per cent to the rears when necessary.

The NX 300h uses an electric motor to power to the rear axle, which is activated when the vehicle accelerates from rest or when the front wheels begin losing grip.

IS RECEIVES AN UPGRADE

A year after Toyota's premium division launched an even stronger Lexus IS contender, the line is already getting some decent upgrades.

In front, the car adopts a hunkered-down stance, aided by what Lexus calls its "spindle" grille, that features LED fog lights for 2015. Compared to the previous generation, the redesigned IS has a 20 per cent stiffer platform and it grew nearly nine centimetres in length with seven more centimetres between the front and rear wheels. Width and height increase only slightly.

Rear-seat sedan riders benefited with a bit more leg and hip room, which was a drawback for the previous generation.

Even though the IS 250 and 350 are on a new platform, they still retain their previous engines. That means a 204-horsepower, 2.5-litre V6 for the IS 250, while the IS 350 continues with 306 horsepower from its 3.5-litre V6. The rear- and all-wheel-drive IS 250 and the all-wheel-drive 350 sedans (convertible versions are rear-drive only) employ six-speed automatic transmissions. An eight-speed automatic is standard when the rear-wheel-drive IS 350 sedan is selected.

The AWD system splits the torque evenly between the front and rear wheels in normal driving situations, but can transfer up to 70 per cent to the rear when wheel slippage is detected.

The IS has Drive Mode Select throttle and transmission programming, with Eco, Normal and Sport S modes for rear-wheel-drive models, plus a Snow mode for AWD-equipped cars. Additionally, the returning F Sport package that's optional on all IS 250 and 350 sedans and convertibles adds a Sport S+ setting that firms up the suspension for more aggressive driving.

RAM RUNS LIGHT ON FUEL

Who would have guessed that the macho Ram 1500 would ever trumpet its fuel performance?

That was partially addressed when Chrysler's ever-popular 3.6-litre V6 found its way into the engine bay along with an eight-speed automatic transmission. The latter can also be attached to the 395-horsepower, 5.7-litre Hemi V8, but 4x4 models come with a six-speed auto.

The big engine can shut down four of its eight cylinders when not needed, such as when under light-load conditions or when heading downhill.

The most unique engine is the optional 3.0-litre EcoDiesel V6, which makes the Ram 1500 the only light-duty diesel pickup in North America. Using the same figures as for the Jeep Grand Cherokee — 240 horsepower and 420 pound-feet of torque — with the eight-speed automatic, it can tow 3,270 kilograms.

Rams get further fuel-reduction assistance with stop-start technology that turns off the engine at rest, then instantly fires it up again once the brake pedal is released. Electric power steering cuts parasitic power losses.

Optional is air suspension with load leveling and five height settings, one of which lowers the body at highway speeds by 1.5 centimetres to cut the wind.

Finally, a "thermal management system" is designed to quickly get the Ram's crankcase oil and other fluids up to operational temperatures, which assists in conserving gas.

As for body styles, regular cab models are available with a six-foot, four-inch box, or an eight-footer, while Quad Cabs get the shorter box only. The larger four-door Ram

Dodge Ram 1500 EcoDiesel. CONTRIBUTED

Crew gets you a five-foot-seven-inch bed, or the six-foot, four-inch bed option. There are also available locking storage compartments built into the rear fenders that can each hold up to 120 355-millilitre cans that can be specified with centrally controlled power locks.

When it comes to four-wheel-drive, buyers can choose between a part-time system and an on-demand setup that automatically engages when road conditions warrant. Other neat touches include a capless fuel-filler system and a front-park assist that will parallel park the "beast" into incredibly tight spots.

Ram HD adds SRT V8

The 2014 model year was a real re-balance for the Ram 2500 and 3500 pickups. When Ram upped the stakes with its optional Cummins turbo-diesel available in bad, badder and baddest grades in 2013, that left a rather big step down to the base 5.7-litre V8.

What to do? Well, add the 6.4-litre SRT V8 to the lineup, of course.

But back to the Cummins. The tameest of the 6.7-litre inline six-cylinder power plants is rated at 350 horsepower and 660 pound-feet of torque, while the intermediate version pushes those numbers to 370 horsepower and 800 pound-feet. For maximum thrust and grunt, the 385-horse unit lays down 865 pound-feet for 2015.

The Cummins can be matched to a six-speed manual transmission (the only shift-it-yourself in its class), or a six-speed automatic. The result is a truck that can haul and tow up to 7,730 kilograms of trailer weight and up to 820 kilograms of tongue weight using a conventional Class V hitch.

The turbo-diesel has a standard exhaust brake that uses the engine's compression to help decelerate the vehicle. That means shorter stops and less brake wear.

Another Cummins bonus is that the interval between oil changes is 24,000 kilometres.

Still available is Chrysler's venerable 383-horsepower, 5.7-litre Hemi V8 with a seemingly light 400 pound-feet of torque.

Now back to the 6.4. Previously an SRT exclusive in the car line, it's optional in both the 2500 and 3500. The 6.4 delivers 410 horses and 429 pound-feet of torque. For maximum towing, a coil-sprung rear suspension with air bladders is available on 2500 models, while 3500s use optional air springs integrated into the existing leaf-sprung suspension.

Four-wheel-drive is available, but in the HD it has a disconnect feature that disengages the forward driveshaft from the transfer case when not needed, thus increasing fuel performance.

Inside, owners will also appreciate the cab design, with a dashboard with available touch screen controls (with redundant switches) for the communications and climate control systems. — Wheelbase Media

EXPRESSIVE STYLE

Mazda6. CONTRIBUTED

STUNNING MAZDA6 INCLUDES MORE OPTIONS THIS MODEL YEAR

Mazda should be praised for following through on its promises. While other automakers make statements about losing weight and then abandon them like it's the third week of January, Mazda's SkyActiv philosophy keeps turning out cars that are trimmer.

From most angles, the Mazda6 is more expressive than the previous car and closely resembles Mazda's Shinari and Takeri concept cars that revealed a new styling direction. The distance between the front and rear wheels was increased by about five centimetres (the longest among its direct competitors, claims Mazda) for extra passenger room, while overall length has been reduced by about the same amount.

The only engine is a 2.5-litre, four-cylinder that generates 184 horsepower and 185 pound-feet of torque. The uniqueness of this engine is its higher-than-usual 13:1 compression ratio that gives it much of its extra punch. In addition, its specialized components, including the pistons and direct fuel-injection system (which cools the combustion chambers to allow the higher compression), means it can run on regular-grade fuel.

Transmission choices include a six-speed manual that uses a MX-5 Miata-inspired short-throw shifter, or the optional six-speed automatic.

The base GX model comes with the usual power and comfort ingredients and push-button start. It also comes with a touch screen display with Bluetooth networking and a rear view camera.

Among the more interesting options is Mazda's Intelligent Energy Loop (i-ELOOP). The system's compact capacitor stores energy from the alternator, then feeds it directly to the car's numerous electrical components. Mazda claims the i-ELOOP cuts fuel consumption by about five per cent. – Wheelbase Media

Mazda3 is a pacesetter among sedans

It's rare to find beautiful mainstream vehicles in this highly regulated, ultra-competitive market, but Mazda's redesigned sedan and hatchback models get the vote.

Mazda3. CONTRIBUTED

Like its Mazda6 and CX-5 brand mates, the Mazda3 benefits greatly from the SkyActiv suite of structural and powertrain enhancements. That means a stiffer platform and finely tuned suspension and steering components geared to sports-car-like precision.

But the real showstoppers are the base and optional power plants. There is a 2.0-litre four-cylinder that produces 155 horsepower and 150 pound-feet of torque; the optional 2.5-litre four-cylinder peaks with 184 horsepower and 185 pound-feet of torque. Both are available with six-speed manual transmissions, while six-speed automatics are optional.

Regardless of your choice, the new Mazda3 is an impressive piece of work that will be appreciated by those who really enjoy driving something sporty, but without the space limitations that traditional sports cars impose.

– Wheelbase Media

Mazda CX-5. CONTRIBUTED

ATTRACTIVE CX-5 OFFERS PLENTY OF ROOM

Mazda makes one of the most enjoyable tall wagons to drive, which doesn't punish you or your passengers.

The attractively designed five-passenger CX-5's mechanical bits are promoted under the SkyActiv name that made its initial appearance with the 2012 Mazda3.

More than simply a marketing slogan, SkyActiv represents a holistic transformation of the powertrain, plus various other components that help save fuel in addition to turning Mazda vehicles into better driving machines.

From a chassis and suspension perspective, the automaker's engineers have attempted to infuse the vehicle with as much MX-5 Miata-type sporty behaviour as possible, combined with highly efficient engines and transmissions.

The base power plant consists of a high-compression, 2.0-litre four-cylinder that, due to its unique design, is able to run on low-grade 87-octane fuel. Output is rated at 155 horsepower and 150 pound-feet of torque.

The much peppier 2.5-litre, four-cylinder produces 184 horses and 185 pound-feet of torque. Both engines are available in front- or all-wheel-drive, but the 2.0 is the only engine that can be had with a manual transmission (front-wheel-drive only).

The base GX includes the 2.0 and the usual air conditioning and power-operated items, along with cruise control and push-button start.

Head up the line and you will find the GS and GT models, both equipped with the 2.5. The top-end GT comes with a nine-speaker Bose-brand audio system, 19-inch wheels, standard all-wheel-drive, dual-zone climate control and leather seats.

In terms of safety, optional Active Smart Braking Technology can "see" stopped cars in front and slow you down before a collision.

Other safety features include front airbags, side-impact airbags, anti-lock brakes, stability control, and traction control.

Effective in different ways

Contrasting coaches.

Belichick, Carroll have risen to the top in their profession with football IQ that 'is way up there'

Put Bill Belichick behind a microphone and he's C-SPAN — minus the information.

Pete Carroll is more like a Lifetime movie. Or, as defensive lineman Michael Bennett puts it, "He has that Benjamin Button effect on everyone."

The Super Bowl coaches approach their obligations to the public and media from opposite ends.

Belichick, coaching for his fourth championship in New England, is dry, offers little to no insight and rarely makes anyone laugh. Carroll, looking for his second straight title, is a high-fiving, fist-bumping extrovert who started one of his news conferences this week with a welcoming, "What's up?!"

Different styles have produced similar results, though.

sixth Super Bowl appearance as a head coach and his Patriots are as close as there is to a dynasty in the current NFL. Carroll's team is being mentioned as a possible dynasty, as well, and that notion will only gain steam if the Seahawks win Sunday and become the first back-to-back champions since New England in 2003-04.

Dissimilar as they are, they have both built their teams on a foundation of unflinching candour inside their locker and meeting rooms — a quality Carroll brings to some of his public speaking, but one that Belichick eschews.

"What you see on TV is what you get, pretty much, from the two," said Patriots cornerback Brandon Browner, who previously played for Carroll in Seattle. "They have similarities too, though. Their football IQ is way up there. They are so different, but at the same time, they're the same. That's why they both have succeeded at this level."

Patriots owner Robert Kraft, who hired Carroll back in 1997, then Belichick in 2000, called his former coach, "pretty special to be around. A

He feels he set Carroll back by not giving him the full control he wanted, and the owner adjusted his style when he made the next hire.

Everyone benefited: Belichick and the Patriots — and Carroll and Seattle.

There's no big mystery to all this coaching success, Belichick insists.

"It's about players making the plays that your team needs to win," he said. "I think as a coach, you want to make sure you don't screw that up."

Canadian content.

Punter says his second Super Bowl "is really a dream come true"

Canada will have a pair of players to root for in the Super Bowl for the second straight season: Seahawks tight end Luke Willson and punter Jon Ryan.

Willson, who grew up outside Windsor, Ont., made his way to the NFL after playing at Rice University, where he learned a quick lesson in how big football is in the United States.

"It was pretty intense, especially coming from Canada," Willson said. "It was a very, very different atmosphere. Football is almost like a religion down there."

Ryan, of Regina, Sask., never got to experience football in America until he ended up in the NFL — with Green Bay in 2006 — by way of the CFL and the University of Regina.

"It was kind of cool ... to have that many people care about the game of football."

Luke Willson, who grew up in Windsor, Ont., about the moment he realized the game is "almost a religion" in the U.S., when he played for Rice University.

"Growing up in Canada, I never thought I'd have the opportunity to play in the NFL," said Ryan, who threw a touchdown pass on a trick play in Seattle's comeback win over the Packers in the NFC Championship. "Now to have been playing here for nine years, playing in my second Super Bowl is really a dream come true."

The Seahawks have one other foreign-born player on its roster: Defensive lineman Jesse Williams, who was born in Brisbane, Australia. He spent the season on injured reserve after injuring his knee during fall camp.

Bad boy Diaz opens up to random hugs

MMA. DanaWhite's six-foot trash-talker has his lovers, too

Nick Diaz got a hug the other night, out of the blue. A male fan came up to the oft-prickly UFC fighter on the street and showed him some love.

"Somebody just walked up and hugged me," Diaz recalled. "I figured I know this person, I live in a small town. Then it was like, 'I don't know this person at all.'"

"I've got to deal with that."

The 31-year-old bad boy from Stockton, Calif., wasn't really complaining. Pressed on the issue, he conceded the happy stranger was a "nice guy" and "a huge fan."

It speaks volumes about Diaz that the former Strikeforce champion attracts such a following despite often refusing to play by the rules and showing a snarling persona rather than a smile.

There are two kinds of Diaz watchers: those who applaud his "I don't give a damn attitude" and those who tune in hoping he will have the trash talk beaten out of him by his opponent.

For the UFC, that's two fan bases in one and helps explain why it keeps going back to what amounts to a six-foot walking headache.

UFC president Dana White was reaching for the Aspirin again this week when Diaz failed to show up for a public workout session Wednesday ahead of his UFC 183 showdown Saturday with former middleweight champion Anderson Silva.

It's the first fight for the 39-year-old Silva (33-6) since he suffered a gruesome leg injury in a loss to title-holder Chris Weidman at UFC 168 in December 2013.

Diaz (27-9-1) had elected not to get on his scheduled flight, the UFC later explained. The fighter landed in Las Vegas later Wednesday but not before White tweeted a photo of a milk carton with Diaz's face on the side.

White said this week that a film crew for the "UFC Embedded" video series dispatched to Diaz's home had been unable to find him.

Blatter not alone in FIFA election

Beating the entry deadline by hours on Thursday, Sepp Blatter formally joined a FIFA presidential contest he is widely expected to win.

Blatter published a low-key message on Twitter confirming an expected bid to extend his scandal-scarred, 17-year leadership of football's wealthy governing body by four more years.

Prince Ali bin al-Hussein of Jordan has declared his intention to stand, while UEFA President Michel Platini is central to Europe-led efforts opposing Blatter, including supporting the prince's campaign.

Europe's anti-Blatter strategy intensified on Wednesday when Portugal great Luis Figo became a surprise contender, and UEFA executive committee Michael van Praag of the Netherlands set out manifesto highlights including a plan to expand the 32-team World Cup, FIFA's cash cow. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Curling. Rocque in line to join an elite group of back-to-back champions

Kelsey Rocque finds herself on the verge of joining elite company at the Canadian junior curling championships.

The 20-year-old Edmonton native has claimed a spot in the women's gold-medal game after Alberta defeated Nova Scotia's Mary Fay 8-3 on Thursday.

Rocque is looking to become just the fourth skip in the event's history to win back-to-back women's titles.

"It's pretty crazy right now, it hasn't really set in," said Rocque, whose Edmonton team of third Danielle Schmiemann, second Holly Jamieson and lead Jessica Iles-ran its record to 9-0. "But I couldn't ask to be in a better place. We're super happy right now."

Alberta will close out round-robin play on Friday morning against New Brunswick's Justine Comeau (5-4) before starting preparations for Saturday's gold-medal match.

Rocque hopes to join Cathy King (1977, 1978), Suzanne Birt (2001, 2002) and Kaitlyn Lawes (2008, 2009) as back-to-back champions.

In other women's action, Saskatchewan's Kristen Streifel (5-4) hit for three in the 10th end for an 8-7 win over Quebec's Emilia Gagne (4-5) while New Brunswick took an extra end to beat Ontario's Chelsea Brandwood (6-3) 9-7.

Meanwhile, the defending men's champion, Braden Calvert of Manitoba, took another step toward a title defence with a 5-4 victory over Northern Ontario's Tanner Horgan (4-5).

Manitoba improved to 8-1 with the win and can clinch a berth in Sunday's men's gold-medal game with a win Friday against Alberta's Karsten Sturmay (7-2).

"It's nice to go out there tomorrow knowing that we can control our destiny," said Calvert. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oilers affiliate moving to coast

AHL. Edmonton among franchises to benefit with farm team closer to home

Five NHL teams will soon have their top minor-league affiliates closer to them as the American Hockey League unveiled a new Pacific Division that will begin next season.

The Edmonton Oilers will have their AHL team in Bakersfield, the Calgary Flames in Stockton, the Los Angeles Kings in Ontario, the Anaheim Ducks in San Diego and the Sharks in San Jose.

"We know that the players are going to benefit from the proximity of the teams," Oilers president Kevin Lowe said at a news conference in San Jose. "This is going to enhance development."

Previously, the Oilers' top minor-league team was in Oklahoma City, the Flames' in Glens Falls, N.Y., the Kings' in Manchester, N.H., the Ducks'

Close quarters

The Kings, Sharks and Ducks will get the benefit of having their teams in the same state. San Jose's AHL team will even share SAP Center with the Sharks, something that hasn't been done with an NHL team thus far.

- The Toronto Maple Leafs' top affiliate, the Marlies, are in the same city, and the Philadelphia Flyers once had the Phantoms in another arena across the parking lot.

in Norfolk, Va., and the Sharks in Worcester, Mass.

Calgary general manager Brad Treliving thanked fans in Glens Falls but acknowledged the difficulties of having an AHL team so far away.

"I can tell you from having a team on the East Coast ... those cross-country flights, dealing with a different time zone when you play a game Friday night and you need a guy in Saturday, there are challenges involved in it," Treliving said.

This idea has been bandied about for several years. Ducks general manager Bob Murray said he and former GM Brian Burke talked about it as soon as they got to Anaheim. The Pacific Division is the first phase of trying to geographically balance out the AHL, which historically has been centred in the East.

AHL president David Andrews called relocating five teams a complex process but one that "launches a new era for the American Hockey League and for professional hockey in California."

Edmonton to Bakersfield and Calgary to Stockton isn't that close, but it's an improvement. Lowe estimated that the AHL's Condors will have about 20 to 25 extra practices per season than the Barons had in Oklahoma City, when the closest opponent was a six-hour bus ride away.
